FOREWORD

It is a genuine pleasure to be able to issue this catalogue of Dutch bulbs for it demonstrates that the brave, indomitable Dutch people have begun to surmount the great difficulties occasioned by the occupation of their country during the war.

Tulips are not only a symbol of beauty and dignity to the Dutch people but a way of economic deliverance as well. They have grown their bulbs in the hope and expectation that their American friends will buy them generously not only to satisfy a pent-up hunger for their beauty but to give the Dutch the necessary dollar exchange for the purchase of raw materials and machinery in the United States. It is a happy circumstance that enables our countries thus to help each other.

Already they have expressed their appreciation of parcels of food which rained down on their country from our bombers during the closing days of the war by lavish gifts of bulbs for planting in public gardens in New York and the national capitol. These were presented by Dutch representatives in a fitting ceremony held at the New York Botanic Gardens early this spring.

We are proud to be the American Representative of C. G. Van Tubergen, Ltd., Zwanenburg Nurseries, Haarlem, Holland, who grow a greater variety of bulbs than any other firm in Holland including many rare species unobtainable elsewhere. Many of the most popular Tulip and Narcissus varieties now in commerce, as well as many other bulbs, are introductions of this firm. Van Tubergen bulbs are the cream of the Dutch crop, specially grown for those who demand the finest bulbs obtainable. In spite of the utmost difficulties during the war, they succeeded in maintaining their unique collections in good condition and in adding to them many choice new originations.

Although modest in make-up, we believe this catalogue to be one of the most complete lists of bulbs to be issued this year. We call your attention to the many classes of Tulips including the magnificent collection of rare botanical species. In addition, the Hyacinths, Narcissi, and many smaller types of bulbs are well represented. The special collections of Tulips and Daffodils were prepared with great care by our Horticulturist, and we trust that they will appeal to our customers.

Our policy is to handle all correspondence and orders in a prompt, courteous and efficient manner and upon this basis invite your patronage.

DWIGHT AND DORIS BARNES.

DARWIN TULIPS

The Darwin Tulips are the best known of the late, long stemmed classes of Tulips which are now so popular, other types being the Breeders and Cottage Tulips. So much crossing of these types has taken place that it is sometimes difficult to determine just to which class a late Tulip belongs. Darwins are characterized by their particularly strong stems, globular flowers and petals of heavy substance. These Tulips are magnificent for large beds and in groups in borders. A number of varieties may be used for late forcing and the best for this purpose are: Bartigon, City of Haarlem, Frans Hal, Philip Snowden, Princess Elizabeth, Rose Copland, William Copland and William Pitt. Figures following names denote height in inches.

CULTURE. Tulips are easily grown. Plant from October 1st until the ground freezes in well-drained soil about 5 inches deep spacing at least 5 inches apart. They may be lifted as soon as the foliage has dried and stored in a dry, cool place until the next planting season arrives. Use a well-balanced fertilizer over them after planting.

SINGLE EARLY TULIPS

Single early Tulips usually flower at the end of April. These Tulips do not exceed 16 inches and are therefore particularly recommended for places exposed to the wind. They may be planted any time from the middle of September until the ground freezes; about 3 inches deep and 4 or 5 inches apart.

Since early Tulips are used in great quantities for forcing, the bulbs should be potted immediately on receipt and treated the same way as hyacinths. Tulip bulbs want at least three months for a good root development before they can stand a forcing temperature.

Those marked * are the earliest flowering varieties and are specially recommended for forcing. They are classified by their blooming periods as (E) early, (M) medium, and (L) late. The figure gives height in inches.

TRIUMPH TULIPS

In cold and backward seasons, the Darwins and other May-flowering Tulips are delayed in blossoming and consequently may interfere with the planting of summer bedding material. For this reason, the introduction of this new strain will be welcome, as all varieties are vigorous in growth and the robust stems carry large Darwin-like flowers. They flower immediately after the Single Early Tulips and about ten days in advance of the Darwins. We recommend the Triumph Tulips for growing in pots as the stems are very stiff and the flowers last a long time. May be had in flower from the end of February onwards.

These "broken" Darwin Tulips are a magnificent strain of May-flowering Tulips with blotched, feathered and striped flowers, much superior to the old Bybloemen Tulips. The flowers are not so large as those of the Darwins and the plants do not grow so tall. We do not advise planting them with the self-colored varieties but if used as isolated groups in the shrubbery, they will be astonishingly beautiful.

TULIPA

The following collection of Tulip Species or Botanical Tulips includes a great number of beautiful and interesting varieties which show a bewildering variation in size, shape of flowers, structure of the leaves, habitus, etc., and have only in common the fact that they grow wild in a bewildering variation in size, shape of flowers, structure of the leaves, some parts of the world: Asia-Minor, Central Asia, Greece and the Mediterranean region. Culture has not modified them. A number of the choicest may be planted in the rock garden between creeping plants, or in colonies in small, warm nooks where the larger flowered Garden Tulips would be out of place. As the leaves appear early, we advise planting as late as possible with the exception of Tulipa Sprengeri which must be planted immediately upon arrival.

To all gardeners interested in this beautiful genus, we recommend Sir Daniel Hall's "The Genus Tulipa", obtainable from the Secretary of The Royal Horticultural Society, London. In this work, much practical information is given on the species offered below and frequent reference is made to species and varieties introduced by us.

CROCUS

Crocuses are in great demand due to their early flowering habit. They are hardy and can remain undisturbed for years. The bulbs must be planted immediately on arrival, either in the garden or in pots. Crocuses are often planted in lawns, but the grass should not be cut before the Crocus leaves are entirely withered. If cut too early, the bulbs will not flower a second year.

For pot culture, the Crocuses must be planted in pots in a good sandy loam. These pots can be placed in the garden, then the whole pot must be covered with 3 or 4 inches of soil. This place must retain sufficient moisture as the bulbs want a lot of water for good root development. The pots are usually brought into the house when severe frost threatens, usually about the middle of November and then kept in a cool dark cellar. Many amateurs follow the habit of keeping the pots in a dark cellar from the start until they are ready for the light. Crocuses want a lot of water during the time of root formation, and pots should be inspected weekly to see that the soil has not become dry. It is very important that the pots are standing in a really cool place in order to develop good roots. By the middle of February, the pots can be brought into the living-room, still better in a cold or slightly heated room.

Crocuses cannot stand artificial heat and should be grown as cool as possible. When the temperature is too high, the bulbs will make many leaves, but one will find the buds are going blind.
